Brian Iverson and Susan Hazard are the featured artists at Port Townsend Gallery in July.

Iverson has been blowing glass in the Pacific Northwest for more than 25 years, and the Olympic Peninsula provides plenty of inspiration.

His technique involves both lampworking and furnace work, and every glass piece he creates is hand-blown and one-of-a-kind.

Lampworking is a type of glasswork where a torch is used to melt the glass. Such pieces are created solo and tend to be smaller in size, and pieces include turtles and fish.

For larger pieces, Iverson works in a hotshop with a team using a furnace with temperatures reaching nearly 2000 degrees. The molten glass is formed and shaped into various items such as tumblers, bowls, and pumpkins.

Iverson's collection at the gallery features fluted bowls in varying sizes, shapes, and colors along with a tidepool series and garden art.

Hazard's new series of paintings are exploring the subject of Nature vs. Humanity.

Hazard, who has maintained a presence in Port Townsend since 2005, lived in Ireland in the early 1990s and returns often. She has exhibited work in the U.S., Wales, and Ireland, and is a returning member to the Port Townsend Gallery.

Drawing upon her background of living in Ireland, the landscapes and seascapes contrast the structures of human civilization contrasted with the pervasive influence of nature.

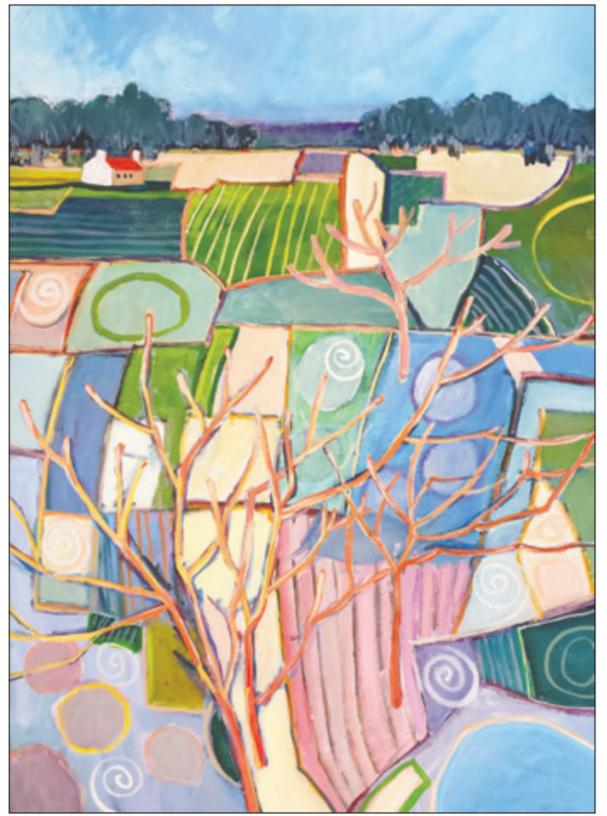

Hazard works with oils or acrylics, using brushes for a different expression of marks, and a different effect and atmosphere. Bright, contrasting colors provide energy continuously present in her paintings.

Field Day at Fort Worden filled with family, fun, food

DEREK FIRENZE

How many bouncy castles is too many?

That's right, there's no such thing. This year's Field Day at Fort Worden on Saturday, July 2 has set the bar high with five various bouncy buildings, even including adult options.

After you bounce, not before, try one of the many food vendors including Barbarian Fine Cuisine, Fiddlehead Creamery, Sugar Hill Farms, and La Cocina. Or if attempting aviation through inflation isn't your thing, don't worry because there is so much going on you won't be able to do it all.

Live midday jazz, free root beer floats, and sack races are just the start.

To cool off you might participate in the watermelon eating contest or maybe you fancy yourself to be a tough guy and want to try your hand in the tug-of-war competition for a $1,000 grand prize.

As the sun nears setting, the volume will only increase with live music by The Shift and Elias Alexander of Ramblrx whose stylings of flute and bag pipes along with electronic dance music are sure to get the party started.

Heading into the evening will be a laser light show put on by Slip Lasers out of Seattle who are known for doing big festivals all over the country. The show will be set to classic rock.

OBITUARIES

Carol Colley

JAN. 31, 1942 - JUNE 8, 2022

Carol Colley passed away peacefully on June 8, 2022 after a stroke. She battled several health challenges with a determined will to live life fully. She was a loving mother, wife, grandmother, friend, and community member for many in Port Townsend and beyond.

Carol worked hard her whole life to achieve professional goals and spent the final years of her career as controller of the Department of Justice in Oregon. Carol shared her passion for education by supporting her two children's pursuits and through active involvement in the American Association of University Women including serving on committees in Port Townsend, Washington, and Lincoln City, Ore. She was grateful for the supporting love and fun shared with her Team Survivor friends.

Carol treated many people as "adopted," extended family with her motherly personality including volunteering as a reading aid at the school. Carol loved good food and beautiful flowers, but was most calmed by the presence of the ocean. Carol loved animals, particularly dogs, and friends are invited to donate to the Humane Society of Jefferson County in her honor.

A celebration of life gathering will be held at the Fort Worden beach kitchen shelter in August for friends, family, kids and dogs. Date to be determined (invites through word of mouth or reaching out to micaela@seedalliance.org for more details).
